SPEAKER AT:

GREEN CITIES, HEALTHY PEOPLE. PLANNING HEALTHY URBAN SPACES

October, 30th and 31st, 2013, Barcelona

Elisabeth Richardson, Environment and Health Spatial Analyst, University of Edinburgh, United Kingdom

Elisabeth Richardson is a health geographer working at the Centre for Research on Environment, Society and Health at the University of Edinburgh, Scotland. Her research focusses on health-promoting environments, particularly natural spaces, and how they might influence the health of populations. Natural spaces are likely to be a great public health resource, but she is concerned that policy making might have leapt ahead of the evidence base. Her work is therefore motivated by the goal to strengthen the evidence base and publicise findings more widely.
